Toddlers Tech and Talk

New research has shown that under 3's are very comfortable in their use of new technology! This is according to Professor Julia Gillen - Professor of Literacy Studies, Lancaster University.

She presented this latest research on

'Toddlers, Tech, and Talk: Understanding how very young children learn language and literacy at home in a digital age' at the London Advisor's Forum in Pimlico on March 17th.

The research investigated how the home lives of children up to age of three, intersect with digital technologies in diverse families across England, Northern Ireland, Scotland, and Wales.

The research paper is published here:

Understanding the World in City Nurseries.

Smithfield House Nursery promotes cultural awareness and scientific curiosity.

Children learnt about the significance of Eid as a celebration of the end of Ramadan - a time of fasting and reflection. Through storytelling, songs, and crafts, the children were introduced to the values of kindness, generosity, and gratitude.

They also learnt about the customs of Eid, such as wearing special clothes, giving gifts, and sharing meals with family and friends. By experiencing the sights, sounds, and traditions of Eid, the children begin to understand its importance in a simple, joyful way.

The little scientist session was making perfume from fresh flowers. It was a fun and creative activity that allowed the children to explore their senses. Using petals from flowers like roses, lavender, or daisies, children learnt how to gently crush and mix the flowers with water to make their own perfume.

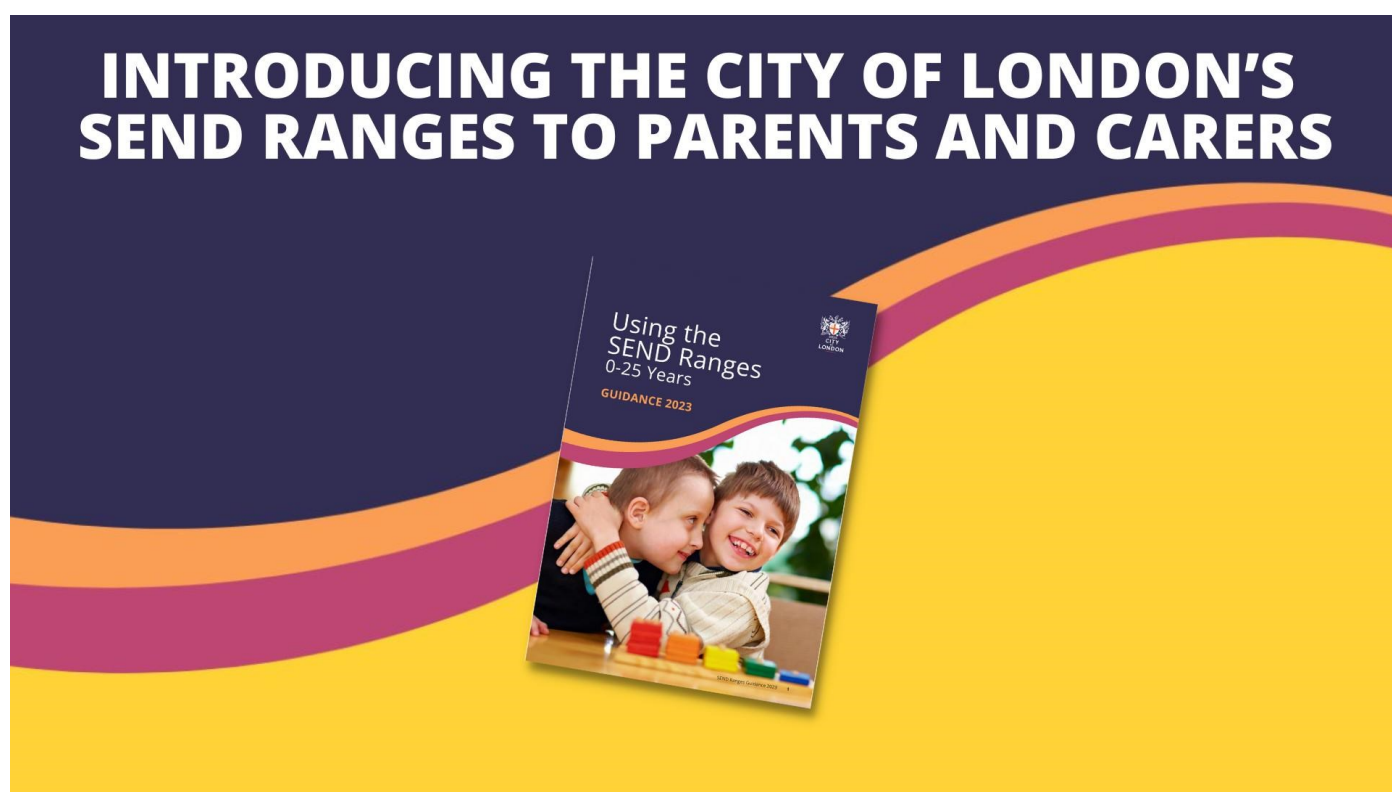

This hands-on process introduced them to basic concepts of scent, nature, and creativity, while fostering their fine motor skills and imagination. The activity was a delightful way to encourage curiosity and sensory development that was playful and engaging.

SEND Ranges Guidance Video

Useful information for parents and carers with responsibilities for SEND children and young people.

The City of London's SEND Ranges provide a framework for staff in all settings 0-25 to address the early identification of needs, provide ideas for curriculum adaptation, guidance on assessment and the effective deployment of resources, including staff.

The Ranges are based on the four areas of the SEND Code of Practice and give guidance and ideas from Early Years to Post 19. It includes the Preparation for Adulthood (PfA) outcomes from the Early Years through to 25.

The SEND Ranges provide guidance on what should be 'ordinarily available' to meet the needs of the most complex child and young person who maybe either in a mainstream setting, additional resource base or a specialist provision.
